CITY OF KIRKLAND1989 Community Development Block Grant
Local Program Policies*GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The City of Kirkland is located along the northeastern shore of Lake Washington, encompassing 10.3 square miles. The City's population is 35,820; of whom 11,688 individuals are classified as low/moderate income. Kirkland has well-established residential areas, since it has been incorporated since 1905. Commercial activities in the central business district, outlying neighborhood commercial centers, and commercial/industrial parks continue to expand.

Kirkland has an extensive parks system with over 28 percent of its 5.8 miles of Lake Washington Shoreline in public ownership. Park usage has increased dramatically with an ever increasing demand for baseball fields and waterfront facilities. Prior to the annexation of Rose Hill and Lower Juanita in 1988, the City of 19,430 had 210 acres of park land in a 6.3 square mile area. The 16,390 new citizens in 4.0 square miles had only 39 acres of park land, or about one quarter the per capita acreage of the residents of the older city. This acute park deficiency in the newly annexed areas is reflected also in a deficiency of public walkways, storm drainage, and other public facilities.

NEEDS ASSESSMENT

The City has identified two primary groups of low/moderate income residents: senior citizens and families with school age children.

Based upon 1980 census data, 10.2% of the City of Kirkland's residents are 60 years old or older. Many of these senior citizens live on fixed incomes. The Kirkland Senior Center served 2,515 seniors in 1985. The unduplicated count of seniors served in 1986 increased to 2,600. During 1987, Kirkland Senior Center provided services to 2,750 seniors. In 1988, 3,100 seniors were served by the Kirkland Senior Center. Senior Center staff estimates that approximately 20 percent of seniors served are low income.

Information obtained from the Lake Washington School District indicates that 1021 students with Kirkland addresses qualified for the federally subsidized school lunch program during the 1987-88 school year.

Based upon this demographic information, it would appear that two of the population groups with public service needs are senior citizens and low income families with children.

Based on the work of the Human Service roundtable, the primary populations with unmet human service needs are children, teenagers, the fragile elderly and low income people.

PROGRAM POLICIES

Kirkland has two primary funding priorities: capital improvements to low/moderate income neighborhoods and the provision of public services to its eligible population.

The City has been improving its pedestrian network by constructing sidewalks which link neighborhoods to essential public services and the Central Business District. The City places a high priority on creating linkages between low/moderate income neighborhoods and essential public services and will continue to use CDBG funds to help accomplish this goal. With the development of a Capital Improvement Program, the City will also consider using CDBG funds to rebuild the City's deteriorating infrastructure and improve its park and recreational facilities.

The City has identified service to low/moderate income families with children as a priority for Public Service funding. Funding priority will be given to projects which address the employment, childcare, housing, health care and family support needs of this target population.

The City has also identified services to the fragile elderly as a priority for its Public Service Project funds. Based upon 1980 census data, citizens age 60 years and older comprise 10.2% of the City's population. Funding priority will be given to projects which address the housing, health care and transportation needs of this population.
